4 THINGS TO DO TODAY

1 Laugh out loud

Need some mid-week respite from work woes? We think it's a good idea to get a few cocktails at Cheval and catch their Wednesday Wisecrackers show. Your host for the evening is stand-up comic Kunal Kamra, who needs to indulge in comedy to take a break from his jaded advertising career. Headlining the night are Daniel Fernandes, who quit a career in advertising to pursue comedy, and East India Comedy's funny man, Atul Khatri (in pic).

2 Chat with Amish Tripathi

The author, who rose to fame with his wildly successful debut book, The Immortals of Meluha, will discuss his upcoming novel at the launch of the new Crossword store in Goregaon. After the Shiva trilogy, the author turns his focus to the heart-stirring mythology, Ramayana, in the Ram Chandra series. At this discussion, he will share with the audience tidbits on the first book of the series, Scion of Ikshvaku.

3 Go out for dinner and a show

Wondering what to do on date night? Good Earth's Dinner & a Movie extravaganza may be a great option. Here, you get to tuck into a scrumptious three-course meal, while watching a quirky rom-com penned by Steve Martin. Directed by Anand Tucker, the film revolves around three characters — an old, rich businessman called Ray

Porter (Martin), a young, ambitious salesgirl at Saks Fifth Avenue (Claire Danes) and a socially awkward graphic designer (Jason Schwartzman).

Chanakya's Chakkravyuh Investment Game

If words like "investment" give you the heebie-jeebies, may we suggest you try this board game, which makes the concept of financial investment strategies fun. Chanakya's Chakkravyuh's seems like the easiest way to gain financial literacy, without your eyes getting glazed over due to boredom. The board game experience is designed in such a way, that it will give players an insight into their own real life financial patterns, and one can figure out if they are a smart investor or not.

The best part about the game is that it comes accompanied with an-hour long training session — a situation that's ideal for a group of newbies. An instructor will be sent over to your house to teach you the ABCs of the game, and help you with setting up the bank and doling out professions (doctors, teachers, lawyers) to the rest of the group. After an hour is up, the instructor will leave, and let you enjoy the addictive game with your gang. Online tutorials are also available, where you can brush-up on gameplay.

Printmaking workshop

Printmaking isn't merely the process of reproduction on paper — the medium can be used to create original pieces of artworks as well. To learn more about this creative process, sign up for an extensive two-day workshop that will teach you everything you need to know about printmaking. Helmed by Indrajit Prasad, whose works have been shown in galleries such as Project 88 and Gallery Beyond, the workshop will teach participants how to apply the dry point and etching techniques. The materials will be provided at the venue. All you need to bring is yourself there, preferably in old clothes.
